

Tara Stewart
Global Communications Leader
DuPont Photovoltaic & Advanced Materials

Tara currently serves as the Global Marketing and Communications Leader for PVAM. She is responsible for execution of marketing and public relation strategy as oversees the government affairs and media relations work for the PVAM business. Tara leads a global team of regional experts who work to further the mission and brand identity of DuPont PVAM's B2B and B2C businesses with downstream customers.

Prior to her current role, she was in DuPont corporate communications responsible for managing DuPont's reputation with global audiences. She managed crisis communications and issues and coordinated public relations for the science and technology teams, sustainability, and government relation groups. Tara also managed public relations for corporate mitigation work and media communications and training for plant managers and sites in the Southeastern United States.

Prior to joining DuPont in 2010, Tara worked at Walmart as Director in Public Relations where she directed the budget and management for marketing, corporate communications, sponsorships, and community giving, acted as company spokesperson and conducted media training for key leadership. She also served as media director for sustainability topics for the corporate communications group. She also held regional public affairs roles and corporate communications roles in her seven years with the company.

Tara holds a B.A. in English from the College of Charleston.